Additional Notables and Information

Tim started in the legal support industry in 1989 and went on to purchase Southwest Reporting in 1994 where he merged his legal video support company into a highly respected court reporting firm which had been established in 1972. For the past 29 years, Tim has been involved in many major national litigation claims and has been part of many multi-million dollar verdicts. Tim manages Southwest but still does field work in the legal arena in a specialized manor regarding e-PIP™ video depositions, trial presentations and conference AV support and consulting.

Tim developed e-PIP™ technology (electronic Picture in Picture) over 10 years ago where he innovates video depositions and brings the trial setting to the deposition for greater emphasis being place on documents, video clips, and many other forms of electronic evidence live during witness interrogations and records the e-PIP™ live during the deposition; eliminating post production and additional cost.

Tim has published several online articles regarding Legal Video Services and Litigation Support Services. Tim also has trained many legal videographers in the industry and consults local and national companies on training and proper equipment purchase and use.

Tim has worked in every state in the union over the past 29 years except for Alaska and Hawaii providing legal video in depositions, day in the life productions and trials.

Background and Family

Tim, in the early 80's, worked for CenterPoint Energy formerly known as Houston Lighting and Power Company from 1981 to 1989 going to night school while working in their computer department as Systems Analyst. While working in the computer department, Tim programmed and oversaw computer operations for a multi-billion dollar corporation's computer database and systems operations.

Tim has been married for 29 years and has four grown children. Tim is a native Houstonian along with 3 generations past on both sides of the family and was related to the late Joe Jamail.
